CTEC Invites Public to Signing Ceremony

(Coulee Dam, Wash. July 14, 2009) – The Colville Tribal Enterprise Corporation (CTEC) will have a ceremony on Thursday July 23, at 1p.m. at Freedom Point Plaza, the park across from the Coulee Dam Casino in Coulee Dam, Wash. The event will celebrate a new joint venture between Colville Tribal Service Corp. (CTEC’S construction company) and Graham Group (U.S.). Guest speakers include: Troy Johnson, CTEC CEO, Ken Snyder, president Graham Contracting LTD, John MacClain, CTEC board chairman, Ken Hopkins, CTC director and Mike Finley, Colville tribal chairman. A barbecue lunch will be provided.

The new company called Colville-Graham Ventures, LLC dba “Twelve Bands” will specialize in general and civil construction work.

Colville Tribal Service Corporation (CTSC) is owned and operated by the Colville Confederated Tribes’ and is committed to quality workmanship. CTSC has been providing general building and highway and utility services since 1992. Graham is an employee-owned construction company that has been operating since 1926 with offices throughout the United States and Canada. They offer general contracting, project management, design-build and construction services.

With Graham’s operational and bonding capacity and CTSC’s past performance with federal agencies, it poses a win-win situation for both companies. The celebration is open to the public.
